Contributors

Diego Almeida is Assistant Professor of Psychology at New York University Abu Dhabi.

Benedetta Baldi is Full Professor of Political discourse and linguistic strategies and Semiotics of new media at the University of Florence. She is President of the Second Cycle Degree Course in Communication practices, languages, and cultures, and Coordinator of the first-level University Master's Degree in Advertising, communication, and event creation. Her research interests include language analysis, the theoretical approach to the didactic of languages, and in particular communication theory, the political discourse and its pragmatics, and the relationship between language, media, and society, a topic covered in numerous publications. She holds a UNESCO transdisciplinary professorship in Human Development and Peace Culture at the University of Florence, and is a member of the Corecom (Regional Committee for Communications) Toscana.

Majlinda Bregasi is an Associate Professor of Italian and Latin at the University of Pristina, Kosovo, and a member of the Scientific National Council of Kosovo. She earned her Ph.D. in Conversation Analysis from the University of Prishtina in collaboration with the University of Florence. Dr. Bregasi has pursued postdoctoral studies at several institutions, including Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore in Milan, Università per Stranieri di Siena, Università di Perugia per Stranieri, and Bristol University in the UK. Her extensive research covers various linguistic domains, with a primary focus on Discourse Analysis. Notably, she wrote the first book-length application of Conversation Analysis of the Albanian language entitled Conversation Analysis- Beyond Political Debate (2015).

Ludovico Franco is Associate Professor in Linguistics at the University of Florence. His main research interests are morpho-syntax and neurolinguistics. He has published a monograph and several papers in international journals, among which NLLT, The Linguistic Review, Glossa, Lingua, Studia Linguistica, Probus, Transactions of the Philological Society and Language Sciences.

Rosangela Lai is currently a Research Fellow at the University of Pisa. Previously, she was a Postdoctoral Fellow and Adjunct Professor of Linguistics at the University of Florence and an Alexander von Humboldt Research Fellow at the Georg-August University of Göttingen.

Greta Mazzaggio is Assistant Professor at the University of Florence. Her research interests are related to Psycholinguistics, with a particular focus on Pragmatics and on Bilingualism/Multilingualism. She previously worked at the University of Neuchâtel, with the Swiss Government Excellence Scholarships, and at the University of Nova Gorica.

Irene Micali (Ph.D. in Linguistics, University of Florence) is a Research Fellow at the University of Florence where she is also an Adjunct Professor of Didactics of Modern Languages (L-LIN/02). Her research interests include minority languages, pragmatics, sociolinguistics, and language contact. She has authored L'occitano di Guardia Piemontese tra lingua e identità (2022).

Yasmina Moussaid is a PhD Student in Linguistics and Oriental Studies at University of Florence. Her main research interests concern the bilingualism of Italian-Arabic speakers, specifically code-switching phenomena, from both a morphosyntactic and sociolinguistic perspective.

Manjola Nasi is a Professor of Literature and Culture at the University of Tirana, Albania. She holds a PhD in Literature from the University of Tirana and has conducted Postdoctoral Research as a Fulbright Scholar at the University of Massachusetts in Boston, USA. Her research interests include literature, text analysis, and cultural studies.

Yang Ni is a Lecturer and Academic Coordinator at the Department of Italian Language and Culture at Nankai University, in China. From 2019 to 2020, he worked as a Research Fellow at the University for Foreigners of Siena, where he earned a PhD in Linguistics and Didactics of Italian as a Foreign Language (L-Lin/02). His research interests include Second Language Acquisition and Teaching Italian as a Foreign/Second Language, with a particular focus on Chinese learners.

Giuseppe Rugna is a Postdoctoral Researcher at the University of Florence, where he received his PhD in Theoretical Linguistics in 2023. His research interests include the morphosyntax of wh-elements and wh-constructions, chain-formation and the minimalist theory of grammar.

Leonardo M. Savoia is Professor Emeritus at the University of Florence where he taught General Linguistics for many years. His research interests concern the analysis of the structural properties of natural languages, the phenomena of contact and variation, and discursive practices. His production concerns phonological and morphosyntactic phenomena and, together with Benedetta Baldi, the pragmatic and semantic aspects of discourse. He is a Correspondent Academician of the Accademia della Crusca and a member of the Academy of Sciences of Albania and the Academia Europaea.

Federico Schirato is a PhD Student in Linguistic and Oriental Studies at the University of Florence. His research interests include the syntax of verbal arguments and adjuncts, inflectional and derivational morphology, phonology, as well as comparative linguistics, with a special focus on Indo-European historical linguistics.

Chiara Stornaiuolo Pratesi obtained a PhD in Hebrew Language and Literature at the University of Firenze in April 2024. Her research interests range from the semantic of Ancient Hebrew and Modern Hebrew to archaeology and geography of ancient Israel: during her PhD studies she examined Biblical Hebrew lexemes related to meteorology.

Giuseppe Vitolo is a Tenured Professor of Italian and History at Secondary Education Institutes (Upper Secondary School level). He holds a PhD in Italian Linguistics from the University of Florence, is a subject expert at the University of Naples Federico II, and is the coordinator of the Linguistic and Ethnographic Atlas of the Amalfi Coast (Amalfi Cultural and Historical Center). He is the author of monographs, essays, and articles in the fields of linguistic dialectology and historical linguistics, focusing on phonetics and morphosyntax, as well as in sociolinguistics.

Christos Vlachos is Assistant Professor of Linguistics at the University of Patras, Greece. His research interests lie in theoretical and experimental syntax. He has been the Principal Investigator of 2 major research projects related to clausal selection, one funded by the Hellenic Foundation for Research and Innovation (University of Patras, 2018-2022), and the other by the European Commission, in the context of Marie Skłodowska-Curie Research Fellowships (Queen Mary University of London, 2015-2017).