

Contributors

Citation: (2025) Contributors.
Qulso 11: pp. 199-200. doi:
<https://doi.org/10.36253/qulso-2421-7220-16582>

Marco Casentini is a Postdoctoral Research Fellow in Chinese Linguistics at the University of Verona and Adjunct Lecturer in Chinese Language and Culture at the University of Naples “L’Orientale”. His research focuses on Chinese syntax, especially the syntax-pragmatics and syntax-information structure interfaces, with a particular interest in discourse markers and the Topic-Comment structure in contemporary Chinese.

After graduating in Theoretical Linguistics at University Ca’ Foscari in Venice, Francesca Dal Santo has started her PhD in Linguistics at University of Padua; her main research interests concern clausal ellipsis in Italian, Complementizer Deletion and embedded elliptical structures, both from a synchronic and diachronic perspective.

Feng Ye earned her degree in Languages, Literatures, and Comparative Cultures from the University of Florence, where she also completed her Ph.D. in Linguistics. She is currently an Associate Professor in the School of Foreign Languages at Guangzhou Maritime University.

Ludovico Franco is Associate Professor in Linguistics at the University of Florence. His main research interests are morpho-syntax and neurolinguistics. He has published a monograph and several papers in international journals, among which NLLT, The Linguistic Review, Glossa, Lingua, Studia Linguistica, Probus, Transactions of the Philological Society and Language Sciences.

After a long period of self-taught study, Alessio Frosali decided to consolidate and formalize his studies by enrolling in the Humanities for Communication program at the University of Florence, graduating in 2025. He is particularly interested in advances in semiotics, philosophy of language, pragmatics, and the persuasive use of political/advertising language, as well as the intersection of linguistics, anthropology, and cognitive sciences.

Alice Giovanelli is a Master’s student in European and American Languages and Literatures at the University of Florence. Her interests include experimental pragmatics and cognitive linguistics, with special attention to the influence of metaphor on mental representation.

Rosangela Lai is Associate Professor of Linguistics at the University of Pisa. Previously, she was a Research Fellow at the University of Pisa, an Alexander von Humboldt Research Fellow at Georg-August University of Göttingen, and a Postdoctoral Fellow and Adjunct Professor of Linguistics at the University of Florence.

Greta Mazzaggio is Assistant Professor at the University of Florence. Her research interests are related to Psycholinguistics, with a particular focus on Pragmatics and on Bilingualism/Multilingualism. She previously worked at the University of Neuchâtel, with the Swiss Government Excellence Scholarships, and at the University of Nova Gorica.

Gloria Ramundo is a first-year PhD student in Linguistics at the University of Florence. Her current research focuses on the analysis of the metaphony phenomenon in the Salento area from an acoustic-articulatory, phonological, and neurophysiological perspective. Her research interests include Acoustic and Articulatory Phonetics, Phonetics and Phonology, Neurolinguistics, Italian Dialectology and Linguistic Variation.

Yufeng Ruan is currently an Assistant Professor in the School of Foreign Studies, Nankai University, Tianjin, China. Her research interests include syntax and semantics with special attention to the analysis of Chinese and Italian. She also concerns herself with issues relating to second language acquisition.

Federico Schirato is a PhD Student in Linguistic and Oriental Studies at the University of Florence. His research interests include the syntax of verbal arguments and adjuncts, inflectional and derivational morphology, phonology, as well as comparative linguistics, with a special focus on Indo-European historical linguistics.

Glenn Starr is a Teaching Assistant Professor in the Department of Linguistics at the University of Wisconsin - Milwaukee. His research interests include experimental pragmatics, psycholinguistics, and second language acquisition.