

Contributors

Laura Bafle is Associate Professor of General Linguistics at the University of Ferrara. Her research concerns theoretical linguistics, phonology and the grammar of Italian varieties.

Benedetta Baldi is Professor of Communication and Discourse Analysis at the University of Florence. Her research includes different fields of linguistics and pragmatics, specifically language teaching and communication theory. As for the second subject, she is concerned with communication processes, political language, the relationship between media and cognitive and pragmatic capabilities and social/cultural identity. Her latest book #Opinione immediata addresses communication and social media.

Deborah Cappelli is a PhD Student in Linguistics at the University of Florence. Her main research interest focuses on L2 acquisition, interlanguage, language transfer and educational linguistics of similar languages, in particular in Spanish and Italian language. Her PhD thesis deals with the morpho-syntactic aspects in the language acquisition of similar languages under the supervision of Professor Benedetta Baldi.

Serena Camilla Crotchi is a PhD Student in Linguistics at the University of Florence. Her main research interest focuses on different fields of linguistics and pragmatics such as communication and discourse analysis, corporate and political communication with a narrative approach. Her PhD thesis deals with alternative truths and delegitimization pragmatics strategies in social media under the supervision of Professor Benedetta Baldi.

Lena Dal Pozzo is Finnish language Instructor and co-Professor in charge in the Finno-ugric Languages and Literatures Course. In her PhD thesis she investigated the syntax-discourse interface in Italian L2 and Finnish L2 learners. Her research interests include L2 acquisition, bilingual acquisition, L2 theoretical applications to language teaching.

Ludovico Franco is a FCT Researcher in Linguistics at CLUNL/Universidade Nova de Lisboa. His main research interests are morphosyntax and neurolinguistics. He has published a monograph and several papers in international journals, among which NLLT, The Linguistic Review, Glossa, Lingua, Probus, Transactions of the Philological Society, Language Sciences, and Canadian Journal of Linguistics.

Vera Gheno is a Sociolinguist specialized in CMC and a literary translator from Hungarian. She is a Lecturer at the University of Florence and collaborates with Accademia della Crusca and Zanichelli. Her most recent book is Tienilo acceso. Posta, commenta, condividi senza spegnere il cervello (2018, Longanesi) written with Bruno Mastroianni.

Cristina Guardiano is Associate Professor of Linguistics at the University of ModeMORE. She got her PhD in Historical Syntax at the University of Pisa. She investigates the parametric analysis of nominal phrases, the study of diachronic and dialectal syntactic variation, crosslinguistic comparison and phylogenetic reconstruction.

Merita Hysa is a Full-time Professor of Linguistics at the University of Shkodra (Albania), in the Department of Linguistics since 2003. Dr. Hysa has conducted studies of Albanian phonology and morphology. She has extensively published in Albanian and English on phonological and morphological studies, and is currently studying the phonological structure of morphemes in Albanian language.

Rosangela Lai is a linguist specializing in Sardinian, an endangered minority language spoken in Sardinia, Italy. Currently, she is at the University of Göttingen as an Alexander von Humboldt Postdoctoral Fellow. Previously, she was a Postdoctoral Fellow and Adjunct Professor of Linguistics at the University of Florence.

M. Rita Manzini is Professor of Linguistics at the University of Florence. She is the author of several books, including Locality (MIT Press, 1991) and (in collaboration with Leonardo Savoia) I dialetti italiani e romanci (ed. Dell'Orso, 3 vols, 2005), A Unification of Morphology and Syntax (Routledge, 2007), Grammatical Categories (Cambridge UP, 2011), The Morphosyntax of Albanian and Aromanian Varieties (De Gruyter Mouton, 2018). She is also the author of several articles for volumes and journals, including Linguistic Inquiry, Natural Language and Linguistic Theory, The Linguistic Review, Lingua, Probus, The Journal of Linguistics, Transactions of the Philological Society. Her research focus is generative syntax and morphosyntax.

Angelapia Massaro (MA, Roma Tre) is a Ph.D. Candidate in Linguistics and Oriental Studies at the University of Florence. Her interests include the nominal domain, the morphosyntax of possession, dialects of Southern Italy, and Indo-Iranian languages.

Greta Mazzaggio is a Postdoc Researcher at the Humanities Department of the University of Florence, Italy. Her main areas of interest are in the field of experimental pragmatics, with research on different populations (typical children, adults, atypical populations). She is also interested in cognitive aspects related to second language acquisition.

Diego Pescarini is a Researcher at the French National Centre for Scientific Research (CNRS) and teaches Syntax at the Université Côte d'Azur. He held research and teaching appointments at the Universities of Zurich, Frankfurt, Bristol, and Padua, where he obtained his PhD. He has been awarded two Marie Curie Fellowships.

Anna Roussou is Professor of Linguistics at the University of Patras, Greece. Her research interests are Theoretical Linguistics and, in particular, Syntactic Theory (crosslinguistic variation, parameters, interaction with morphology and semantics). She is the author of three books (one co-authored), and co-editor of the Journal of Greek Linguistics.

Leonardo M. Savoia has been Professor of General Linguistics at the University of Florence. He is "Accademico corrispondente" of the Accademia della Crusca and was President of the Italian Linguistics Society (2003-2007). His research regards phonology and morphosyntax of Italian dialects, Albanian and Aromanian, sociolinguistics, and, with Benedetta Baldi, communication and political language. Together, they have published articles and books, and recently Linguistica per insegnare, Zanichelli 2018.

Giuseppina Silvestri is Research Associate in Linguistics at the University of Cambridge. Her research interests are centered on morpho-syntactic variation, with a focus on non-standard Romance and Greek varieties. She also works on phenomena of the phonology-syntax interface as well as on the formal aspects of the nominal domain.

Silvia Sommella is a PhD Student in Linguistics at the University of Florence. Her main research interest focuses on cognitive linguistics in German and Italian languages. Her PhD thesis deals with the securitization of migration in parliamentary debates under the supervision of Professor Benedetta Baldi and Professor Daniela Pirazzini.

Melita Stavrou is Professor of Linguistics at the School of Philology of the University of Thessaloniki. She has authored and co-authored several articles, volumes and book chapters, focusing her research on theoretical linguistics, syntactic theory, the syntax-lexical semantics interface, morphology-syntax interactions, comparative syntax, the morphosyntax of Greek.

Chiara Stornaiuolo received a Bachelor Degree in Cultural Studies in 2015 and a Master Degree in Hebrew Language and Literature in 2018 at the University of Florence. Her research interests range from the semantic of Ancient Hebrew to archaeology and geography of ancient Israel.