

Contributors

Citation: (2020) Contributors. Qulso 6: pp. 457-459.
doi: <http://dx.doi.org/10.13128/QULSO-2421-7220-9710>

Benedetta Baldi is Full Professor of Communication and Discourse Analysis at the University of Florence. Her research includes various fields of linguistics and pragmatics, specifically language teaching and communication theory. As for the second subject, she mostly focuses on communication processes, political language, the relationship between media and cognitive and pragmatic capabilities and socio-cultural identity. Her latest book #Opinione immediata addresses communication and social media.

Serena Camilla Crocchi is a PhD Student in Linguistics at the University of Florence. Her main areas of interest are in the field of pragmatics, communication theory and discourse analysis. She is also interested in cognitive pragmatics. Her PhD thesis deals with post-truth under the supervision of Professor Benedetta Baldi.

Deborah Cappelli is a PhD Student in Linguistics at the University of Florence. Her main research interest focuses on L2 acquisition, interlanguage, language transfer and educational linguistics of similar languages, in particular Spanish and Italian. Her PhD thesis deals with the morpho-syntactic aspects in language acquisition of similar languages, under the supervision of Professor Benedetta Baldi.

Lena Dal Pozzo received her PhD in Cognitive Sciences from the University of Siena. At present she is a Finnish language Instructor and Adjunct Professor of Finno-Ugric languages and literatures at the University of Florence. Her research interests include L2 acquisition at interfaces, bilingual acquisition, language teaching and learning, with particular reference to Finnish and Finno-Ugric languages.

Nicola D'Antuono received his BA Degree from the University of Bologna in 2016 with a thesis on cyclical change in morphosyntax from a generative perspective and his MA Degree in 2018 from the same university with a thesis on fragment answers, ellipsis and negation in Irish. His research interests include generative grammar, syntax, formal semantics and the semantics-pragmatics interface.

Ludovico Franco is a Tenure Track Assistant Professor at the University of Florence. His main research interests are morphosyntax and neurolinguistics. He has published a monograph and several papers in international journals, including NLLT, The Linguistic Review, Glossa, Lingua, Probus, Transactions of the Philological Society, Language Sciences and the Canadian Journal of Linguistics.

Susanna Giovinazzo received her BA in Modern Letters in 2017 and her MA in Modern Philology in 2020 at the University of Florence. Her research interests include a synchronic study of language, political communication, studies on the new languages of social networks and legislative language

Mikheil Labadze received his PhD in Philological Sciences with a thesis on “Speech Characteristics (Questions of Code Switchings) of the Indigenous Georgians – the Laz and the Livanians in the Murguli Gorge (Turkey)” (2013). He is currently an associate scientific researcher at St. Andrew the First-Called Georgian University of the Patriarchate of Georgia.

Rosangela Lai is currently a Research Fellow at the University of Pisa. Previously, she was a Postdoctoral Fellow and Adjunct Professor of Linguistics at the University of Florence and an Alexander von Humboldt Research Fellow at the Georg-August University of Göttingen.

Paolo Lorusso is a Research Associate at the NEtS Center for Neurocognition, Epistemology and Theoretical Syntax at the Scuola Universtiarria Superiore IUSS Pavia. He obtained a PhD in Linguistics at the University of Florence and a PhD in Cognitive Science at Autonomous and University of Barcelona. His research areas are psycholinguistics, morphosyntax, syntax-semantics interface and comparative syntax.

Andrea Moro is Professor of General Linguistics at the Scuola Universtiarria Superiore IUSS Pavia (Italy). He specialized at the University of Geneva, he has been visiting scientist at Harvard and MIT as a Fulbright Student. He is currently researching the syntax of human languages; in particular symmetrical structures and the neurobiological correlates of syntax in human brains. He has published a novel entitled: Il segreto di Pietramala (2018).

Mihaela Marchis Moreno is a Postdoctoral Researcher at CLUNL, Universidade Nova de Lisboa. The focus of her research is comparative syntax, morpho-syntax and the semantics-syntax interface. Topics she has investigated include relational adjectives, the syntax of nominal phrases, control, raising and clitic-doubling. She has recently published a monograph entitled Mismatches at the Syntax-Morphology Interface: the Case of Relational Adjectives with Cambridge University Press.

Diego Pescarini is a Researcher at the French National Centre for Scientific Research (CNRS) and teaches Syntax at the Université Côte d’Azur. He held research and teaching appointments at the Universities of Zurich, Frankfurt, Bristol, and Padua, where he obtained his PhD. He has been awarded two Marie Curie Fellowships.

Maria Grazia Proli is a Research Fellow at the University of Florence. She is an expert in multimedia and e-learning. She currently collaborates in the research program “Organization and construction of multimedia materials for teaching in secondary school. Tutoring and management of e-learning training activities for the inclusion of migrant minors in Italy and Europe”.

Tariel Putkaradze received his PhD in Philological Sciences with a thesis on “The Vowel System of Modern Georgian Language” (1988). He is a Professor at St. Andrew the First-Called Georgian University of the Patriarchate of Georgia.

Giuseppe Rugna is a PhD Student in Linguistics at the University of Florence. He graduated cum laude from the University of Milan (BA) with a thesis on the verbal syntax of the Poetic Edda and from the University of Siena (MA) with a thesis on German wh-copying. His research interests include generative syntax and comparative morphosyntax.

Leonardo M. Savoia has been Professor of General Linguistics at the University of Florence. He is “Accademico corrispondente” of the Accademia della Crusca and was President of the Italian Linguistics Society (2003-2007). His research regards phonology and morphosyntax of Italian dialects, Albanian and Aromanian, sociolinguistics, and, with Benedetta Baldi, communication and political language. Together, they have published articles and books, and recently Linguistica per insegnare, Zanichelli 2018.

Antonio Tagliatela received his PhD in European Languages and Terminology Studies from Parthenope University of Naples and serves as a Research Fellow in English Language and Translation at the University of Viterbo. His research interests and fields of publication are mainly concerned with ELF, Multilingualism and Translation, and Plain Language.

Knut Tarald Taraldsen is a Professor Emeritus in Linguistics at UIT – The Arctic University of Norway and a Researcher at the Masarykova Univerzita (Brno). His research interests are syntax and morphology and the architecture of grammar. For a number years, he has focused on Xhosa and other Southern Bantu languages.

Giulia Tardi is a Research Grant Holder in Language Teaching at the University of Florence where she also received her PhD in Philology, Italian Literature, Linguistics (Linguistic Curriculum). Her main research fields are concerned with Language Teaching and Learning, New Technologies for Language Teaching, and the European Language Portfolio.

Ottavia Tordini holds a Master’s Degree in Italian Studies and Linguistics from the University of Bologna. In 2019, she obtained a PhD in Linguistics at the University of Pisa, where she currently holds a position as a Post-Doc in Phonetics. Her research interests span the fields of experimental phonetics, dialectology and L2/L3 acquisition.

Maria Teresa Venturi is mainly interested in Italian Sociolinguistics and Dialectology. She graduated in 2014 in Italian Sociolinguistics with prof. Neri Binazzi. In 2015 she entered the Ph.D. program with a project about Pasolini’s contribution to the contemporary Italian language. In 2019 she completed her Ph.D. and she is currently “Subject Expert” in Italian Linguistics.

Elina Ylinärä holds a PhD in Linguistics from Roma Tre University and is Adjunct Professor of Finnish language and literature at the University “L’Orientale” of Naples. Her main areas of interest include Finnish syntax, morphosyntax, discourse-syntax interface, mixed categories, L2 acquisition and bilingualism.

