

---

[Authors]

Chiara Balella, PhD in Science, Cognition and Technology (Università di Bologna) since June 2015, is an applied anthropologist. Her main interests are: contemporary and applied anthropology, ICT, anthropology of work and anthropology of education. She is author of Il gruppo di lavoro. Il lavoro di gruppo. Esperienza e condivisione (Premessa), in Bonetti R. (2014), La trappola della normalità. Antropologia ed etnografia nei mondi della scuola, Firenze: SEID Editori.

Elena Bougleux is researcher and professor of Cultural Anthropology at the University of Bergamo and Visiting Scholar at the Max Planck Institute for the History of Science in Berlin. Her research focuses on the strategies and processes of knowledge construction, investigated in their material, cultural and epistemological dimensions. She published Costruzioni dello Spaziotempo (Sestante 2006) and Soggetti Egemoni e Saperi subalterni (Nardini 2012). She is currently involved in the development of the Anthropocene Curriculum Project (MPI and Haus der Kulturen der Welt, Berlin).

Fabio Bracci is researcher at IRIS - Strumenti e Risorse per lo Sviluppo Locale, in Prato. PhD in Sociology at the University of Urbino, his research interests deal with migration studies and social inclusion. On these issues, he is author of books and articles. Here we recall the following: Presenze. Migranti e accesso ai servizi socio-sanitari, 2005; Zone d'Ombra. Migranti irregolari, operatori e servizi socio-sanitari. Un'indagine a Prato, 2012; Emergenza Nord Africa. I percorsi di accoglienza diffusa in Toscana, 2012.

Massimo Bressan, PhD in Cultural Anthropology, President of the Research Institute IRIS (Prato). He carries out social research and evaluation for social, economic and area planning. He taught Cultural Anthropology at the Faculty of Political Science, Università degli Studi di Firenze. His recent publications are: L. Baldassar, M. Bressan, N. McAuliffe, G. Johanson (eds), Chinese migration to Europe, Palgrave, 2015; M. Bressan and E. Krause, Ho un luogo dove lavoro e un luogo dove abito. Diversità e separazione in un distretto industriale in transizione, in: «Mondi Migranti», 1/2014; M. Bressan (ed by), Cities and Neighborhoods Undergoing Transformation, in «Cambio. Rivista sulle trasformazioni sociali», Anno III, 6, Dicembre 2013.

Sebastiano Ceschi, PhD in Cultural Anthropology (2003), conducted ethnographic researches on (mostly Senegalese) migrants at work in Italy, both as street peddlers and as industrial workers. Since 2003 he works mainly in the policy oriented research field for Italian and international bodies. His research work focuses on international migration, diaspora and transnational studies, co-development and migrants' integration. His main geographic field of work are North and Sub-Saharan Africa, especially Senegal and Tunisia

Cristiano Felaco, is PhD in Methodology of Social Sciences. His main research topics are: methodology of the social sciences, mixed methods, social network analysis. As research fellow, he worked on a comparative research on the European government agencies, at Dipartimento di Scienze Politiche e Sociali (DSPS) of Università degli Studi di Firenze. Recently, he works with the Osservatorio Regionale Sistema Universitario Campano on a project about academic dropout.

Stefania Ferraro is Researcher in Sociology at the "Suor Orsola Benincasa" University in Naples. She studies the discursive practices in the government of territory and population, paying specific attention to the discursive dispositive that makes use of the public health as a narrative practice. In the last years she has published: (ed. by),

---

Discorsi su Napoli. Le rappresentazioni della città tra eccessi e difetti, 2015; Una medicina sociale dell'amianto. Per un visibile segreto e un'invisibile verità su Isochimica, in A. Petrillo (ed. by), Il silenzio della polvere. Capitale, verità e morte in una storia meridionale di amianto, 2015; Care economy e strategie tardo-liberali. I professionisti della cura nella Municipalità 3 di Napoli, in «Sociologia della comunicazione», n. 48, 2014.

Elizabeth L. Krause is professor in the Department of Anthropology at the University of Massachusetts Amherst and, during 2013-14, a Fellow at the National Humanities Center in Research Triangle Park, North Carolina. Her scholarship has evolved into three connected research subjects: 1) cultural politics and critical population studies, including reproductive politics and immigration; 2) historical anthropology and social memory; and 3) ethnography and writing culture. Recent developments include globalization, value and global families.

Emilio Gardini, Phd in Teoria e ricerca sociale at "Sapienza" University of Rome; Research fellow in Sociology at the University Suor Orsola Benincasa in Naples. His research interest are urban studies and the relationship between sociology and space. His publications include: Morte ai margini. Una storia nella Napoli contemporanea, in S. Ferraro (ed. by) Discorsi su Napoli. Le rappresentazioni della città tra eccessi e difetti, 2015; Blocco-Bagnoli. Dalla "vocazione naturale" del territorio al controllo democratico, in «Cartografie Sociali. Rivista di scienze umane e sociali», n. 1, 2015; and the book Ombre nella prossimità. Studi sociali sulle pratiche di vicinato, 2012.

Jan Köhler, Dipl-Päd, is senior researcher and board member of Institute for Regional Innovation and Social Research (IRIS e.V.) of Dresden. His main research interests include youth studies, transitions, qualitative methods and gender studies. He worked in several studies e.g. on Women's Science Careers and he currently coordinates projects on qualification for long-time unemployed and vocational orientation projects for pupils.

Manos Matsaganis is an Associate Professor of European Social and Employment Policies at Athens University of Economics and Business (AUEB). He is also Coordinator of the Policy Analysis Research Unit at AUEB. He has served as Special Advisor to the Greek government's Office of the Prime Minister and the Office of the Finance Minister. In 2014-2015 he has been visiting the US as a Fulbright Scholar (Center for European Studies, Harvard and Center of Equitable Growth, UC Berkeley). While at CES, he will focus on interconnected issues arising from the Greek crisis, such as the social and political impact of the recession and austerity measures, the rise of xenophobic populism, and the future of "social Europe".

Angelo Moro is a Master student in Sociology at the École Normale Supérieure of Paris and a student in Political Science at the Scuola Superiore Sant'Anna of Pisa. His research, based on ethnographic approach, focuses on transformations within the Italian working class.

Enrico Nerli Ballati, PhD in Methodology of Social Sciences, is visiting scholar at Institute for Regional Innovation and Social Research (IRIS e.V.) of Dresden as scholarship holder of Sapienza University of Rome. His current research interests concern agent-based modeling and simulation of social processes and youth population not in employment, education or training (NEET). He is currently working on a research project about life-course transitions of young adults NEETs in Saxony.

Marco Omizzolo, PhD in Sociology, editorial director of Istiss, president of the cooperative In Migrazione. He has been visiting professor at the Guru Nanak University and Lovely University (India). He has also collaborated with the Istituto Luigi Sturzo of Rome and with the review Libertà Civili. Actually he collaborates with the master "Immigrazione. Fenomeni migratori e trasformazioni sociali", Ca' Foscari University of Venice. His research work focuses on migration, social services and organized crime. His most recent publications include: with P. Sodano, Migranti e territori (a cura di) 2015, plus a large number of articles on the theme of migration published by scientific review but also by newspapers and magazines (Il Manifesto, Left, Zero Violenza, Articolo21, Corriere delle migrazioni).

---

Veronica Redini, PhD, she was Post-doc and Research Fellow at the University of Perugia. She teaches “Anthropology of Health Care” at the University of Florence and “Anthropology of Migrations” at the University of Modena. Her work focused on working and wage conditions in the Italian garment industries delocalized in Eastern Europe and in Italy. She has done fieldwork researches in Romania (2002-2009, region of Timisoara) and Moldova (2009, region of Chisinau) where she has become interested also migration from Eastern Europe. Since 2010 she works about health policies in Umbria (Italy). Among her publications: Frontiere del “made in Italy”. Delocalizzazione produttiva e identità delle merci (Ombre Corte, 2008); Del dare e togliere corpo al lavoro. Luoghi, merci e persone nel processo di internazionalizzazione delle aziende italiane in Romania, in F. Gambino, D. Sacchetto (a cura di) 2007; L'intreccio perverso. Conflitto e strategie di mediazione tra delocalizzazioni produttive e migrazioni in D. Sacchetto (a cura di) 2011; with M. Minelli, Vulnerabilità e agentività nella sfera più intima (2012), Il “caso”, la vita e le sue condizioni. Per un'antropologia politica del welfare state oggi in Italia (2015).

Pina Sodano, PhD in Sociology, arabist, she is contract Professor of Sociology of Muslim Migration in Europe, at the Department of Political Science - Roma Tre. Researcher at the European Center CeAS, her work actually focuses on non-violence in Palestine. Her publications include: with M. Omizzolo Migranti e territori (a cura di) 2015; Il Sahel tra crisi alimentari e flussi di popolazione, in M. L. Maniscalco (a cura di) Sahel in movimento. Nuove soggettività sociopolitiche tra globale e locale, 2014; with V. Rosato, The Arab Uprisings Through the Eyes of Young Arabs in Europe, in M. do Céu Pinto (ed.), Papers presented to Conference I and II on Thinking Out of the Box: Devising New European Policies to Face the Arab Spring, 2014.

Andrea Valzania, PhD in Sociology, he is researcher at IRIS (www.irisricerche.it) and Professor of Sociology of Work at the University of Siena. Currently, he is also Consultant for PIN Srl - University Centre in Prato on a Special Project promoted by the Tuscany Region. His research interests are mainly focused in two areas: immigration and labour market.

